One of the top EDM artists to ever grace the Las Vegas strip is retiring. Here is how to catch one of his final performances.

Las Vegas has always been known for casinos, hotels, and nightlife. However, Las Vegas has more recently become a hotspot for electronic dance music, known as “EDM” for short. The genre has a huge following of fans and it has produced some extremely talented artists in the dayclubs and nightclubs around Las Vegas. In fact, the careers of some of the world’s most popular DJs and EDM artists have been launched into fame thanks to the Las Vegas strip. One artist that has amassed a following that few can match in Las Vegas, and around the world, is Avicii. In 2012 and 2013, DJ Magazine ranked Avicii as the #3 DJ in the world in their annual rankings.

Avicii hails from Sweden and initially rose to fame through his song “Levels” which, to this day, is still extremely popular among the EDM crowd. He has been a regular on the Vegas strip, packing the most popular venues wall to wall in recent years. To the dismay of many, Avicii has recently announced his retirement from touring and performing live. This summer will be his final tour. Because of Avicii’s popularity, the venues of Las Vegas will be insanely packed with huge lines expected anywhere he is scheduled to perform. But not to worry! Red Carpet can guarantee you a
